DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. A substitute specification in proper idiomatic English and in compliance with 37 CFR 1.52(a) and (b) is required. The substitute specification filed must be accompanied by a statement that it contains no new matter.

Claim Objections

2. Claims 1 and 2 are objected to because of the following informalities: In claim 1, line 2 after "plurality" insert - - of - -. In claim 1, line 2 delete "board" and insert therein - - boards - -. In claim 2, line 2 after "the" insert - - stack of - -. In claim 2, line 2 delete "include" and insert therein - - includes - -. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Johnston (U.S. Patent 5,153,050) in view of Takahashi et al. (U.S. Patent 4,526,835).

Johnston discloses a well known and conventional method for forming a multilayer printed circuit board from a plurality of printed boards and adhesive prepreps. Johnston teaches a method for forming the multilayer comprising providing a stack of printed boards, i.e. insulating layers having conductors thereon, placing outermost conductor layers on the stack, and laminating the stack and conductors under a uniform pressure (Figure 1 and Column 1, lines 11-19 and Column 4, lines 23-57). It is noted Johnston shows the printed boards comprise an insulating layer having conductors on its upper and lower surfaces (Figure 1). However, the printed boards are merely exemplary, and Johnston is not limited to any particular type of printed board. It would have been well within the purview of one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide conductors on one or both surfaces of the insulating layer of the printed board taught by Johnston depending upon the type of multilayer printed circuit board produced as it was well known in the art to form multilayer circuit boards from a plurality of printed boards having conductors on only at least one surface thereof as shown for example by Takahashi et al.

Takahashi et al. disclose a method for forming a multilayer printed circuit board from a plurality of printed boards and adhesive prepreps. Takahashi et al. teach the printed boards comprise an insulating layer with conductors required only on at least one surface thereof (Figure 1 and Column 2, lines 41-43 and 56-64).
